Telcos' Body Backs SIM-Binding Order

Mumbai: Telecom operators have reiterated their support for a Department of Telecommunications (DoT) directive on SIM-binding for messaging apps like WhatsApp and Telegram, dismissing concerns about user convenience and privacy as "misplaced narratives".

DoT in its November 28 order directed app-based communication services to ensure continuous linkage between user accounts and active SIM cards within 30 days. The directive also mandates six-hour logout cycles for web versions, requiring QR code-based re-authentication.

"There has been a crying need that the users' app-based communication services are identifiable at all times without violations to existing rules on privacy and data," said Cellular Operators Association of India (COAI) director-general SP Kochhar.

According to the industry body, which counts Reliance Jio, Bharti Airtel and Vodafone Idea as its members, said SIM-binding is already a standard feature in widely used digital authentication systems such as UPI and payment applications. It said users abroad can continue accessing services through WiFi while keeping their Indian SIM in a secondary slot.

Addressing international traveller concerns, the COAI said this is a "deliberate and essential security safeguard" to prevent misuse and stop untraceable frauds and scams.

The telecom body defended the six-hour reauthentication requirement, saying that high-value systems including banking portals and Digi Locker enforce stricter rules. "The security benefits will far outweigh any perceived inconvenience," the association said. SIM-binding in a long overdue idea and strengthens national security, it said. —Our Bureau

CO MANAGED TO STOP SIGNIFICANT SUBSCRIBER LOSSES

Over 20% of Vi's User Base Remains Inactive, says Study

Recalculation puts telco's ARPU and data usage closer to Jio and Airtel levels

Himanshi Lohchab

Mumbai: India's number three telco Vodafone Idea (Vi) may have managed to stop significant subscriber losses to larger rivals in recent quarters but over one-fifth of its user base remains inactive, according to a new study.

Out of the 197.2 million users Vi reported for the June-September quarter, only 154.7 million are active users, IIFL Capital said in a report.

This could be the key reason why its average revenue per user (ARPU), voice minutes usage and data consumption is significantly lower than peers Bharti Airtel and Reliance Jio.

Vi's reported ARPU for the September quarter was ₹167, far below Jio's ₹211 and Airtel's ₹256. But when the number is recalculated using only active users, excluding machine-to-machine SIMs that generate almost no revenue, the ARPU rises to ₹209 – almost the same as Jio's comparable ARPU of ₹220.

This implies that Vi's actual paying base is much smaller than the reported base.

The findings come at a time when Vi has deployed nearly ₹12,000 crore in capex over the past four quarters to improve its network, and has only recently begun to show a recovery in subscribers.

As per the company, its subscriber churn has dropped by nearly 90% over the last two quarters – a trend the IIFL Capital report now puts into question.

Queries sent to Vi regarding subscriber numbers remained unanswered at the time of going to press.

The telco's reported per-capita consumption of voice and data also appears abnormally low compared to its peers. It reported 585 minutes/month usage per user versus over 1,000 minutes/month for peers. Its data usage was at 19GB/month per user, much lower than its peers.

When IIFL recalculates the se metrics based only on active users, Vi's usage levels jump sharply, becoming comparable to Jio and Airtel. For example, monthly data usage rises to 24GB, close to Jio's 24.6GB and Airtel's 27.6GB. Voice usage improves but remains 30% below the others.

Scindia, Starlink VP Talk Last-mile Links

Our Bureau

New Delhi: Communications minister Jyotiraditya Scindia on Wednesday met with Lauren Dreyer, vice president of Starlink Business Operations at SpaceX to discuss expanding satellite-based last-mile internet connectivity across India.

The meeting comes as Starlink and other satcom companies await the government's allocation of spectrum before rolling out commercial services. The Elon-Musk owned satcom provider has so far secured the mandatory Global Mobile Personal Communication by Satellite (GMPCS) licence and is awaiting final regulatory approvals before starting services.

"A pleasure to meet Lauren Dreyer, Vice President of Starlink Business Operations (SpaceX) and the senior leadership team to discuss advancing satellite-based last-mile access across India," Scindia wrote on X.

The minister further added that satellite technology will play a pivotal role in extending connectivity to the remotest parts of the country and strengthen internet access to every citizen in rural and hard-to-reach regions, ensuring that digital inclusion accelerates broader development.

Ahead of its official launch in India, Starlink has started hiring employees besides leasing office space in Mumbai. It is expected to open a network of nine gateways in India across major cities including Mumbai, Delhi, Chandigarh, Haryana, and Lucknow.

Starlink has also signed a key agreement with the Maharashtra government to provide satellite internet connectivity to government healthcare and educational institutions in rural areas, targeting a launch later this fiscal year.

On Monday, the company updated its website to reflect its 'Residential' subscription plans priced at ₹8,600 per month, along with a one-time hardware cost of ₹34,000. The company retracted the information later, citing a technical glitch.

NEW LABELLING RULES IN THE WORKS

ADB Lifts India's FY26 Growth Forecast to 7.2%

Cites good Q2 performance driven by robust consumption, and expansion of manufacturing and services sectors

Our Bureau

New Delhi: The Asian Development Bank (ADB) on Wednesday raised India's growth forecast for this financial year to 7.2%, from 6.5% in September, citing stronger-than-expected second quarter performance driven by robust domestic consumption supported by the goods and services tax (GST) rate cuts. The projection for 2026-27 remains unchanged at 6.5% because of an unfavourable base effect in the first half of next year, said the Philippines-based multilateral development bank.

ADB said that the drag could be offset by policy measures such as labour market flexibility under revamped labour laws, GST simplification, selective easing of import restrictions and credit support for exporters hit by US tariffs.

Growth in Numbers

GDP growth projections (YoY, in %)

India's gross domestic product (GDP) increased to a six-quarter high of 8.2% in the second quarter of 2025-26, lifting growth in the first half of this fiscal to 8%.

"The strong growth is attributable to robust expansion of the manufacturing and services sectors on the supply side and consumption and investment on the demand side," ADB said.

The RBI has projected 7.3% GDP growth for 2025-26.

Growth is expected to moderate in the second half of the fiscal, according to ADB, as government capital expenditure declines amid fiscal consolidation and export growth softens due to US tariffs. Even so, the development bank expects stronger consumer demand, helped by a buoyant rural economy, impact of GST rate cuts and steady credit growth to support growth.

The US has imposed a 50% tariff on India, including 25% penalty for importing Russian oil. The two countries are currently engaged in bilateral trade pact negotiations.

ADB said India's risks are broadly balanced, with downside risks emanating from trade tensions and weather shocks while successful tariff relief in US trade negotiations could provide an upside.

Stronger growth in India led ADB to raise its 2025 growth estimate for Asia-Pacific to 5.1% from 4.8% earlier.

"Asia and the Pacific's solid economic fundamentals are underpinning robust export performance and steady growth, despite a global trade environment clouded by historic levels of uncertainty over the past year," said Albert Park, ADB chief economist.

Continued openness to trade and investment will be key to sustaining growth, he added.
